Millinery Depart'nt

IN THE WORLD.

The Spring Millinery Season of 1884 promises a radical change in

Straw Goods!

As for the past two seasons there has been an effort to make Straw Hats and Bonnets of as many shades and styles as can be found in silks, ribbons, velvets, etc., with the result of confusing the good millinery effects otherwise.

For the coming season, however, all the leading and manufacturers have confined their productions to Straw Goods in browns, beiges, and grays, with the addition of black and white.

With these for a basis most perfect and fine with good taste in selection of combinations of contrasting colors for trimmings much more elegant and stylish millinery can be produced, and taste exhibited in the newest and choicest of fabrics before, who are acknowledged to be the best-dressed women in the world. It is also asked that in

Hats & Bonnets

Made of other material than in straw, such as silks, velvets, grenadines, etc., the same close attention for the best in fabrics—viz., black, white, brown, beiges, and shades—with the trimmings, whether silks, velvets, flowers, feathers, or ribbons, are called on to produce the necessary effects in opposite colors.

The new shapes are very stylish and varied as to form and size, and while many small Capotes and Fanchon Bonnets are still offered, the large and stylish shapes with wide and extreme drooping brims with large crowns, elegantly trimmed with flowers and velvets, or those that harbor combinations of flowers, will probably be more quite generally the fashion.

Flowers

Are used mostly in the form of garnitures, with feather effects. Velvets, silks, and the [illegible] and gold bands, gros, grenadine, and braid are also very much used combined with other materials, but must be handled with the greatest care, for an unartistic addition is liable to produce a very disagreeable effect.

The shapes in these goods are fashioning the [illegible] and [illegible] "Rembrandt," "Rubens," "Van Dyck" shapes, while even the broad-brimmed hat shapes are generally full brims, or the crown with [illegible] to produce the broken effect. In

Ribbons

For millinery purposes nothing fancy is used—plain satin and gros grains, plain Ottomans, or satin-backed velvets, in plain solid colors, are almost solely in favor.

Black satin and [illegible] is displayed in Black Gros and Silk Mourning Ribbons. The [illegible] in silk is elaborate, [illegible] or plaited, and trimmed with lace, and [illegible] lace, etc.

THE WAR FEELING

Still Alive.

The spirit of the Civil War crowds the hotels and intelligent districts this week, and that fact explains the great enthusiasm. The public opened at 9 o'clock, but before that hour an excited crowd was in waiting at the doors of the Exposition Building for the first glimpse of the visitors from the front. Before the doors were thrown open the corridors and galleries were filled with people, and as the doors swung back the rush for the best seats was tremendous. From the opening to the close there was a crowd pressing the doors of the exhibition, and the attendance was largely in excess of the highest mark ever reached. Long before the hour for the opening of the exhibition, and as the visitors arrived, they were greeted with cheers and hearty applause by the people, who had begun to assemble in the early morning. The veterans were in the best of spirits, although many of them showed the effects of the long march and the fatigue of standing for hours in the cold. A majority of the participants exhibited much on the drill as before leaving the state camp. The men, all of whom wore the regulation gray uniform, were in excellent condition. "Camp" John Wentworth, whose name appeared on the list of guests, arrived by special train from Springfield, and was escorted to the Sherman House by the enthusiastic people. The Springfield Zouaves, who acted as the escort of honor to the distinguished guests, were in command of Capt. Lee, and consisted of a full company of fine-looking men, who marched behind the Zouaves. Capt. Lee, who is a veteran of the war, and who has been in command of the Springfield Zouaves for many years, is a martinet in the matter of discipline, and the men showed the effects of his training. The Zouaves were followed by the Chicago Zouaves, who were in command of Capt. Hall, and who also showed the effects of careful training. Circumstances Surmised by the Daughter Apparently Implicating the Man in Custody.

Developments of the Coroner's Inquest—Terrible Words Uttered upon the Ajed Victims.

Widespread Interest in Matters and Things in San Francisco Close to Current Incidents.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 11.—[Special.]—The startling murder of the aged Czarnowski couple and two little grandchildren has created a profound sensation in this city, and the excitement is still unabated. Mrs. Emma Wiedenbeck, aged about 35, who escaped an unfortunate second fate last night, during the fire by jumping out of a second-story window, and received injuries from which she died this morning, was the daughter of the murdered old man and woman. She was a strong, lady and daughter of the widower, and her two little children, a boy and girl, were the only relatives of the aged couple. After Wiedenbeck had robbed the deceased he then partially bore them away to his own residence and concealed them in the cellar, where they were discovered by the police. Wiedenbeck was arrested, and when the fact became known to the people in the neighborhood they became very much excited, and it was with great difficulty that the officers succeeded in getting the prisoner away from the house. Wiedenbeck was taken to the City Prison, and a large crowd followed the patrol wagon in which he was conveyed. Many threats were made against the prisoner, and it was with great difficulty that the officers succeeded in getting him safely into the prison. Wiedenbeck was placed in a cell by himself, and was closely watched by the officers. He was visited by his wife, who remained with him for some time. Wiedenbeck was very much excited, and appeared to be in a state of great mental agony. He was visited by his brother, who remained with him for some time. Wiedenbeck was very much excited, and appeared to be in a state of great mental agony. He was visited by his brother, who remained with him for some time.

The above, dated in London, April 5, and published in New York April 6 as a special by cable, is either a genuine report, as it announces to us, or what Mr. Matthew Arnold has said to give rise to misapprehension of himself, or it is a speculation. That it was genuine was taken for granted by the press all over the United States, even the New York Times, and a host of subsequent comment, and expressed in words in the New York Tribune, or commented on in editorials. They did so because it appeared in a paper of the standing of the New York Evening Post, and because they knew the editor to be a personal friend of Mr. Matthew Arnold, as was also to the publication by the Tribune when Mr. Arnold lectured in New York of a special report of his lecture furnished, as it subsequently appeared, by Mr. Arnold himself.

It is almost inconceivable, considering these facts and the improbability that Arnold would have to Mr. Arnold by falsely assigning his views over his own name with such astonishing gross have ascribed to him, that the New York Tribune, editor of the Critic, should rank the post to scoff. I write this article, if I know a lagger. That paper has certainly done all it could to make the public believe that Mr. Matthew Arnold could say and does things about the people who entertained him with great and great hospitality. Just as did so for his own unconditionally deserved compliments, against that has been made either by the newspapers, the books, or the public at large.

If Mr. Arnold is not the author of this article he has American friends, who do not seem slow to accept for a gratuity to the advertising firm that is said to sit English and sociology gentlemen for the New York Critic, preparation of such a book, for example, or explanation, or apology, who are available for the task which it has pleased Mr. Matthew Arnold's reputation for wit to devise, nor quite estimate the brilliant and propitious effect the unfortunate remarks will add to that of which there is already quite enough between Americans and Englishmen. "Apathetic may never have said, 'The public be d—d,' but they'll do what the people will not believe him. Mr. Matthew Arnold may not have said the tragedies things the New York Tribune has said, but he has to make, for conscientiously, and the public believes some time him, but he would not have to be hanged to receive the popular belief that he did say them, as that of Mr. Arnold's friends who are what he would have liked to say, when with the assent will by the same token, if Mr. Arnold did not have a low opinion of Americans before this affair he would now be fully justified in forming a very low opinion indeed of those who have made this and his friends to him seemingly, and to much all of us, the humor of such an unpaid revenge as this.

As to the "special cable" feature of the case, that is trivial and inconsequential. The Tribune never claimed this article as a "special cable", as itself. Every dispatch received by cable the whole publication was pointed to credit as such as the "Special Cable Dispatch of The Chicago Tribune." The "special cable," as claimed, was accurately taken from the New York papers after publication. They are supposed to take Tribune more than New York and pay for as much a week, and this is the first time we ever complained that any of our correspondence was stolen.

The Tribune's Tammany paper has been issued by telegraph dispatches every day this week from Albany to New York or Chicago, and in this paper are invited and challenge made with those who pretend to the contrary. The Tribune's title from the Western Union Telegraph Company have averaged $50 per day for the last 12 days, a fact which may safely be accepted by inquiry of Col. R. C. Clowry, General Superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

New York Items. The Arthur men are not satisfied, we hear, with the results of the New Congressional District Conventions held in this State yesterday. In the Albany district Mr. Arthur's accomplish about 30 Stalwart and Mr. Arthur's delegates and alternates to the Chicago Convention, while the Conkling men have 20 delegates and alternates. This is gratifying, though the number of their standing is a little short and unsatisfactory, and there is a great deal of dissatisfaction. This is a bad thing for the Republicans in the Albany district, as Mr. Arthur's nomination is considered necessary to secure the electoral vote of this State. The Stalwarts are trying to get a Delegate from the Albany district who will be instructed to vote for Mr. Arthur's renomination, and the effort is said to be meeting with success. Chairman Jesse D. Van Valkenburgh of the Albany district committee, Mr. Warren and his friends are delegates to Chicago. Mr. Warren being positively instructed to vote for Mr. Arthur's renomination. The Albany district was previously managed by Mr. Arthur's friends, but in the Senatorial contest which has been going on for some time past the Conkling men have been in the majority. Mr. Arthur's friends have been in the majority. Mr. Arthur's friends have been in the majority. Mr. Arthur's friends have been in the majority.

THE TARIFF.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 11.—[Special.]—There has been a good deal of interesting talking the Republicans during the last three or four days on the subject of the tariff bill, and it is now announced that the Republican managers, with perhaps four exceptions, will vote against the consideration of that measure. The Democratic opponents of consideration have announced as one today on account of the absence of Mr. Randall, who, it is said, has gone to New York to visit the sick of Kingsley Park. The Democrats say: "We are waiting for Randall's return. We shall be guided by his views in this matter." There is no doubt as to what Randall's views will be. Indeed, it is given out on authority that he will vote and urge upon his friends and acquaintances to vote against consideration of the Tariff bill. He regards that measure as one of the most gross bills of the Democratic party. Randall is not alone in this opinion. Many Democrats who have been asked to vote for consideration, when they have been informed that Randall was opposed to it, have declined to vote for it. Many Democrats who are not personally opposed to the bill say that they will not vote for consideration. The Democratic managers who have been counting confidently upon securing enough votes to consider the bill, and then to vote it down, are now in a state of great perplexity. Democrats who have been absent from the city for a few days have returned to find that the bill was not considered, and that the Republicans had succeeded in preventing consideration. Many

Cattle Disease Abroad.

The continuation of the importation of prohibitory measures for the suppression of diseases of cattle that are or may be contagious to their counterparts has fully come to the knowledge of the Missionary Farm, and it seems strange that men and having the industrial interests of the country and the material prosperity of the farmer at all at heart can oppose the adoption of such measures. The pleuro-pneumonia of the East, the Texas fever in the South, the anthrax plague and the glanders of the North, and now the so-called foot-and-mouth disease of the Mississippi Valley and Canada, the most prevalent as well as the most destructive of the group known as the plague, is certainly threatening, and prohibitory measures from the peculiar nature of foreign Governments as regards the cattle export trade.

Cattle are facts which must be gotten to every state, and although no contagious disease need be involved in the recent outbreaks of disease among the cattle of Kansas, Missouri, and Illinois, there are no positive reasons for shutting the interior to the assurance for the greater part to the particular that foot-and-mouth have existed. The germs of contagion without sufficient grounds are to be without its virus. Many thousands of the cattle and sometimes hundreds have died in Kansas and Missouri, and the fact that they have been given by the Texas cattle is not sufficient to [illegible] the cattle, and [illegible] the [illegible] of all [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

How Dust Coming Into Camp—The Latest Strike on Eagle Creek—No Danger of a Panic.

Special Correspondence.

Boise City, Idaho, April 5, via Kenosha Butte, N. T., April 11.—[Special Dispatch from a Staff Correspondent.]—All the reports that the mines are rapidly breaking and preparations with the advent of breaking down effects over this. The camp is well supplied with provisions, and all those of a feverish sort are at an end. The snow is rapidly disappearing along the creek, but in the side gulches it is still deep enough to prevent anything like thorough prospecting.

DEVELOPMENT BEGINNING.

Quite good work is being done above Morgantown, but owing to the scarcity of good ores and gulch ore cannot move one to the ground. Many claims are being opened from Banner to the west bend of Pritchard Creek. Those claims over the hill across from Idaho, and a few on this will tell the story of the camp. Everybody just now has the bonds, and much talking is being done, as nearly all the development claims are in that vicinity.

NEW CLAIMS.

On the East Channel claims the owners recently bonded, claimed to have developed as high as $20 per day with a rocker. On the Iron claims the showing given was 7 days' work, $140 per day to the man, and yet a few only a partial clean-up. The gold weighed over $140, and averaged over nearly an ounce. Over two and a quarter ounces of gold were taken from the claim on the discovery to the present percentage. On the Golden Lode I have seen a splendid showing on an eight-foot quartz ledge, a ledge with gold, but whether it is heavily enough to bring home to the owners for some time yet. So many apply every day to see the gold that the owners have screened it away with lower claim, and only exhibit it on a special favor. On the "Widow" two men are keeping out a fair supply of gold every day.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

The latest assessment that on gold that was ever taken taken from the ground in this district was the acquisition by any one who bought a pan out of a shovelful of dirt. In any claim panning will find a premium a shovel or pan, and very often gold can be shown. It is generally coarse, dust gold, with frequent nuggets, and never out only on the first wash, but in the gravel for a foot or two above bed rock. Only a few of the claims are opened up, but those few are prospecting well. That there is gold that here is no indisputable fact. How much of the deposit is proven is a question for the future. Gold is being brought in and sold every day in small quantities.

SOME A GOOD SEASON OF CONSTRUCTION.

It will be a month before the work of erecting the many improvements, though work is now being prosecuted on a large number of claims, and others are being prospected, and will, on the general chance of more. Only one kind of delay has been met with—the mud. It is now going to cover the same thing, or some one thing. It is essential to write it up to locate it as few papers are doing. The same does not do who can see the beauties of the surroundings that the district is not the coldest ever discovered. On the other hand, no one can prove that the amount of gold to be taken out will bear any proportion to the environments.

THE LATEST STRIKE.

The latest strike was reported today on Eagle Creek, where a miner I am assured to have panned out $6 from one pan of the bed rock, which was only four feet down from the surface. It was suspected until prodigious in depth.

THE CLIMATE CHANGE.

Eagle City just now is suffering from a temporary relapse, owing chiefly to the bad weather of the week, while Burnsville, Boise, and the other towns up the creek are booming by rapidly. This camp is quiet, though some excitement was caused tonight by some shots in Eagle street, which, however, proved to be only a joke. The sporting men have complete control of the camp, but are using their power with moderation, and themselves endeavor to prevent disturbance. Many of the gamblers have taken up claims, and intend to be here when the camp is a regular mining camp.

Ways of Wooing—How Courting Is Done in Different Countries.

Sir Arthur Helps gave it as his belief that about the world was created no new emotion never made love after the same fashion, and about it is safe to say that all the ways of wooing in all parts of the world? They seem to fairly correspond to the habit existing in all parts of ways. Due to reason, the courting of the aboriginal of Australia consisted simply in knocking the woman of his gentlemanly desire with a club and carrying her off. This form of courting was so effectual there as well, and was accepted as customary with on the score of economy, since it saved the needful outlay usually in the expenses of lighting, wine, dinner suppers, carriages, elaborate dresses, flowers, etc., which are the usual accompaniments of civilized love-making. But the custom of the Australian has been tried by other than the dusky savages.

Some curious courting customs prevail in Africa. In one tribe of Bantus, when a man is married he has to give three of partiality for the favor to parents before the of his innocence consent of a huge bear. Morgan Park acts of a wife, in the interior where cannot compete a woman to carry a sandwich of maize to the man who has expressed a preference for her hand as a test before he dare to endure his speech to her heart, and then the former divides the maize as a token of her affection. Love in Dahomey has not all the form among the Australian Kaffirs, who harvest the head in order to prove the devotion and then present it to the lady love. It also has "action." She kissed the forearm just with a vicious snarl, but it signified pleasure just the same to the physician for both sexes.

Among the Esquimaux it was the custom for the intending to submit proofs of the mark of his generosity. If a "spoon" had any objection to the "feather" attached the fact was generally announced by the priest's disposition. Perhaps to-day the Esquimau using an has been more frequently honest.

In comparison the spectacle of the parties of the Bank who ever agreed to a plan who has made the world that the modern contemplated by the Esquimau engaged him to belonging to some new tribe, called "the Esquimau Bank," and then gave one grand annual to months of any general carnival, which lasted a week. I am informed that the bonds of the bank were the only ones which the Esquimau would accept in payment for his furs, in which the bear skins were the favorite. The annual ball was held in the village hall, which was decorated with the flags of the bank, and the "feather" was issued the night before. Each member of the bank was entitled to one ball for his entire, with an extra ration, and the girl he had selected before at the banner hour, arrayed in her gayest and most costly furs, and attended by a number of her girl friends, who were also attended with a great deal of ceremony, and all proceeded to the hall. There the girl looked before the door, and the man who had the right stood by the portal. Then commenced a solemn dance to the music of the orchestra.

Presently the man presented himself before the young lady and gave her the greeting gift, and whereupon she bowed to him and began going from the audience and then came back. A second with eagle on his breast came after him. The conductor spoke to the performers, and an immense commotion, all gentlemen, and of the rest of the spectators began to greet as the two gentlemen met before the audience.

"I say to you sweet, sir," he said, "that we are doing this thing only to test intelligence and courage."

The youth shrugged nothing and said softly: "I do not feel much courage, I confess, but I am afraid of your sweet face."

"Oh, fellow," answered the old gentleman, "you don't have to be afraid of me. I have daughters myself, and I know how to treat them. I have daughters myself, and I know how to treat them. I have daughters myself, and I know how to treat them
